AI assisted sample Clearly labeled original input

This passage was drafted with Codex assistance and is labeled as an AI assisted practice sample. It describes a fictional reading club that is preparing an autumn session. The team has a draft agenda, a box of paper, and a list of questions that remain open. No participant names or real customer records are included. The room has not been confirmed, so the draft leaves that field undecided. A reliable report of this exercise should preserve that gap rather than invent a location. The purpose of keeping the source label is to make the writing process clear. A detector may assign a high score, a low score, or no score if its requirements are not met. None of those outcomes should be rewritten as proof that a particular person wrote the passage. The human control for this exercise must be written by the person doing the test, with their actual process evidence. This file does not pretend to be that control and does not include a fabricated typing history.
